PROGRESSIVE CENTRALISTS

Governor Hodges of Kansas calls himself a progressive Democrat and declares his belief in the right of the people to rule. To give practical application to his ideas of progressivism he is campaigning for amendment to the constitution that would abolish the state legislature and establish a commission with power to make laws and appoint the governor and other state officers.

It is not surprising that some men should offer such a revolutionary plan, for there have always been men who believed in a strong, central autocratic government, but we are surprised that a man calling himself a progressive should advocate such a Hamiltonian scheme, and that he should advance as his chief reason for advocating it that it "would restore the government to the people." We are still further surprised that a considerable number of progressive Democrats and Progressive party men in Kansas endorse Governor Hodges' plan. The progressive Kansas City Star commends it in a first page editorial.

We are told that extremes meet, that if we travel west far enough we will turn up east. Can it be that progressivism ends in conservatism, after all?

We fail to see where the Governor expects to reap any special benefits to the people by having the state officers appointed. We have just recently had a change in the Federal Constitution requiring that the United States Senators be elected by the people to make them more responsive to the wish of the people and it would look like a step backwards to permit all state officers to be appointed by a commission. We believe in reducing officers where ever possible, but we do not believe in taking their election away from the people.

SUCCESSFUL FARMING ON SMALL AREA

What Efficiency and Pluck Can Accomplish.

By W. B. MERCER,
Farmer and Live Stock Raiser.
A striking example of what can be accomplished on a small acreage well handled came under the writer's observation a few years ago.

A newcomer landed in a small town in an all cotton section about the time cotton growing was at its lowest ebb. The farmers naturally were looking for some new crop to substitute for cotton, and tomatoes were selected. The people went wild, and all decided to put in a large acreage, the newcomer with the rest. A majority knew nothing about growing the crop from a market standpoint and less about handling it. A small crop poorly packed of an inferior grade and miserably handled resulted in an absolute failure involving every one in debt.

The newcomer had just bought on credit thirteen acres of land, with a cabin on it, and at the end of the season he was involved for more than $3,000. What to do was a serious question. He was too poor to move and had not even the necessities of life to begin another season on. Having a good reputation for honesty, energy and perseverance, he determined to fight it out.

A Friend to the Rescue.

A business firm offered to furnish him a limited amount with which to start again. A gardener and trucker by nature, he decided to continue this line of farming. The previous year's experience had taught him not to depend on one crop, so radishes, cabbage, beans, peas, tomatoes, cantaloupes and other crops were planted on a small scale to furnish ready cash. He also set out a strawberry patch, a fruit orchard, planted early corn, sugar cane and sweet and Irish potatoes. Everything did well that year, and the second year strawberries, cabbage, tomatoes and potatoes were selected for main crops, still growing enough vegetables to supply local demand and a little to ship when prices were good. He shipped nothing but the very best; sold culls and inferior stuff to local trade or fed it to stock. He then established a regular line of customers in the nearby towns and cities who handled his stuff at fancy prices throughout the season. When his name appeared on a package it sold for a good price, while other growers' stuff went to waste for want of buyers. In less than ten years he had paid for the land, wiped out all debts, built a comfortable home, a splendid barn, etc., and had a bank account of several thousands.

FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE

PRACTICALLY CLEAN MILK

By C. B. LANE,
Department of Agriculture.

The reason milk sours is because it's dirty. There's a sample of milk in a college laboratory that is ten years old and sweet. This is clean milk. It is not necessary, however, to produce this kind of milk. Next to clean milk there is certified milk, which is found in all cities. This is produced under direction of county medical milk commissions, which have strict regulations as to production. Cows must be washed, kept clean and healthy, stables kept scrupulously clean, milkers pronounced healthy by a physician, be clean and wear special suits. Milk must be drawn and handled under sanitary conditions and not contain over 10,000 bacteria to the c. c. (fifteen drops).

Certified milk interests only few dairymen. Many are anxious to produce milk practically clean, better than the ordinary product, and which returns better prices than commonly received. This is not difficult to accomplish. Hundreds do it successfully and instead of receiving 4 cents per quart receive 5 and sometimes 6 cents. What are the requirements for producing this milk? It requires no expensive stables or expensive equipment. A few changes often place "just milk" in the "practically clean milk" class. The first requirement is healthy cows, for it cows producing the milk are not healthy all efforts in care and handling are fruitless. A reputable veterinarian must examine the cows and give a clean bill of health. Another requirement is the constant use of curycomb and brush. Feed clean and wholesome food, taking care that dusty hay or food is not fed before or during milking. The farmer must change the old barn—tear out old partitions, floors and ceilings, put in cement floors or cork brick, make ceiling and walls tight, give each cow a swing stanchion, 500 cubic feet of air space and four square feet of light, make windows adjustable for ventilation and whitewash twice a year. The small top milk pail is the greatest help in producing practically clean milk, reducing bacteria 95 per cent. Wiping cows' udders and flanks with damp cloths before milking reduces bacteria 6,000 to the c. c.; milking cows dry reduces bacteria in the next milking by 4,000; brushing cows before milking increases bacteria by 1,000. Careless milking keeps out of milk, as it is possible for one to carry 1,000,000 germs, and utensils must be scalded and the milk cooled.

No if a man desires to do so he can produce "practically clean milk" at small financial outlay.

Fragrant as the new blown rose. In the Orient, where the best tea is grown, the gardens yield two and sometimes three crops or pickings from the same plant. The first picking is in May. The young leaves are tenderest, full of fragrance and strength. The tea which is brewed from them is clear and pure. The later pickings are heavier and have not the natural sweetness of the first crop which makes tea one of the most delicious of beverages.
